

maintaining effective teamwork when working remotely

facilitated working session

How is your team adapting to the reality of working remotely?

Would your team benefit from a facilitated self-audit and action planning session?

“You have little control over the world around you, but full control over the world within you.”

Matshona Dhliwayo

Enforced mass remote working is the current reality, but how are we all coping with this new way of working? Change of this scale brings its own unique challenges and the difference between success and failure can lie in the team’s ability to adapt.

This facilitated working session is designed to help teams communicate openly, take stock, embrace the challenges associated with this new way of working and collaborate to design a strategy for effective teamwork going forwards.

In 2 - 3 hours, we will facilitate a carefully structured process designed to help your team:

- Share concerns, frustrations, and difficulties associated with remote working
- Identify key shared challenges
- Develop a strategy to maintain effective teamwork under remote conditions
- Define actions to be taken to protect psychological health when isolated from work colleagues
- Agree modes and frequency of communication and feedback
- Develop strategies to maximise individual and team productivity under remote conditions

Our approach

Our facilitated working sessions are focused, high energy and interactive. Sessions will be delivered using a virtual learning platform and methodology, while the impact of Coronavirus remains.

We will guide participants through a structured process designed to encourage focused solution-oriented discussion and promote action. All participants will be actively involved. Subgrouping will be used as necessary to encourage individual input and to promote cross fertilisation of ideas.

Group size

Ideally 8-10 participants, but please contact us to discuss larger teams.
